

How to get Centricity Fetal Tracings up on Attending Call Room

Hello,

I'm not sure how important this is, but today I noticed that CPN was not logged in with the auto log in account in the Attending call room, which means the strips will not be running.

If Centricity Perinatal (CPN) tracings are not showing up, you must restart the computer to re-launch the auto-logout account. This will automatically pull up the strips.

You can access Powerchart and/or your email by minimizing the CPN screen, and then you should be able to find the icon to whichever application you need on the desktop. When you are done with your work, maximize the CPN screen so the strips pop back up.

Please do NOT log into the computer under your personal account. The only reason to log into the computer under your personal account would be to access your H drive.

If you need to log into the computer under your personal account (to access share drives etc), it will deactivate the feature that allows everyone to view the strips because you are in your personal account. If you do need to log in via your own account, please restart the computer when you are finished working under your personal account so the person coming on after you can view the strips. Thank you.
